THE MARINER’S ROLE

For 20 years The Mariner’s Role in Collecting Evidence has been the essential guide to the collection, preservation and use of evidence in marine claims. 2010 will see publication of The Mariner’s Role in Collecting Evidence - the Handbook which will address the technological developments in marine data collection and transmission whilst maintaining the essential link with the men and women who crew today’s merchant fleet. Accessibility and readability will be key features of this new publication.

The Mariner’s Role in Collecting Evidence - the Handbook will be written and published by the North of England P&I Association. It will take its place in the North of England’s internationally acclaimed library of loss prevention guides. ‘The Handbook’ will also be issued under the imprint of The Nautical Institute as an adjunct to the main volume. More details: www.nautinst.org or pubs@nautinst.org

The North East Branch of the Nautical Institute has kept its close association with the subject of the book in the compilation of the The Mariner’s Role in Collecting Evidence - The Handbook. Branch members are involved at every stage of research, writing and publishing. Royalties will go to our Education Trust.

The North East Branch has dedicated our seventeenth, international biennial seminar The Mariner and the Maritime Law - 2010 to launch the new handbook, with speeches, presentations and role-play explaining and emphasising the critical importance of the very best evidence.

Speakers will include shipowners, seafarers, experts, insurers, correspondents and lawyers from around the world but you, the delegates, will be the most important people on Tyneside on 12 and 13 November 2010.

Full programme and registration form will be available from June 2010.
